

Edward Arlitt

Edward Arlitt joined the Independent Electricity System Operator (IESO – formerly named, the IMO) in August 1999 and has since fulfilled a number of different roles within the organization, including market development, information technology, the IESO’s Smart Metering System Implementation Program (SMSIP) and, more recently, as a Senior Strategic Analyst with the IESO’s Market and Resource Development Division. He currently serves as Supervisor of the Operations Innovation group within the IESO’s Market and System Operations Division.

Over the course of his career with the IESO, Edward has served on a number of external smart grid committees and currently serves as Chair of the Ontario Smart Grid Forum’s Technical Working Group and Chair of the North American ISO/RTO Council’s (IRC) Emerging Technologies Task Force. Edward holds a Bachelor of Commerce from the University of Toronto, and a Master’s of Science in Information Systems from the London School of Economics.
